labors when the agreement negotiated by the Commissioners was signed by all the members of the conference.

At the State Department it was announced that the agreement would not be made public until confirmed by the Senate While it was called an agreement by the Senate. If the instrument signed was one regulating the conduct of two countries toward each other, as for instance, between the United States and Samoa, it would properly be designated as a treaty, but where the instrument signed is to shape the conduct of three Governments—the United States, England and Germany—towards a fourth party—Samoa—it was held that its proper nomenclature was an agreement. At the same time, as it was a matter affecting the foreign policy of the United States, it would need ratification by the Senate, and therefore, it could not be made public prior to action by the Senate, and therefore, it could not be made public prior to action by the Senate, and therefore, it could not be made public prior to action by the Senate, and therefore, it could not be made public prior to action by the Senate and by their respective Governments. The best of feeling prevailed at the termination of the labors of the Commissioners.

WHAT THE AGREEMENT PROVIDES.

BERLIN, June 15.—America having abandoned her principal objections to the agreement previously arrived at, the plenipotentiaries had only to make unessential modifications in the wording of the draft of treaty.
